The Substitute Specification of 6/25/2010 has been entered.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 18, 19 and 21-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over (DE 202 14 002 U1) in view of Souther et al. (US 2004/0130288 A1)

(DE 202 14 002 U1) discloses a fuse module (1) with fuse units (12) on a carrier for circuit interruption in an automobile environment and combined with an A/D converter (2) for further processing at display (33) via an output data bus (22) (for Claim 22). The fuse units and A/D converter are not housed in the same housing. However, Souther et al. teach in Figure 4, an integrated on-board module (410) located on a vehicle. Module (410) contains an A/D module (322) between fuse shunt (320) and output vehicle controller (370); there is also a processor (350). It, therefore, would have been obvious to incorporate the teachings of Souther et al. and offer a compact grouping of components all housed within the same housing, such as a fuse and A/D converter, thereby resulting in easier maintenance, less modules spread-out needing space and room for attachment and less wiring between individual components, resulting in helping to reduce weight and cost considerations of the overall vehicle product.

Claim 20 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over (DE 202 14 002 U1) in view of Souther et al. and Tsuchiya (US 2004/0095986 A1).

This claim is drawn to temperature sensor utilization. (DE 202 14 002 U1) appears to be silent with respect to temperature considerations, such as, ambient temperature. However, Tsuchiya teaches A/D conversion with temperature sensor compensation. Therefore, it would have been obvious to incorporate the teachings of Tsuchiya as a means to increase accuracy in measurements and conversions especially in a hostile environment, such as, a motor vehicle, thereby resulting in better diagnostics and control.

Applicant's remarks of 6/25/2010 have been considered.

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
